SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1859. TO THE EDITOR OF THE POLYNESIAN.

SIR :- To lessen in some degree the tedium of an idle hour, I pen, from memory, for insertion in the " Polynesian," the following stanzas. They were handed me, in Ms., some years ago, in Lima, Peru, by the super-Yours respectfully, OTIUM CUM DIGNITATE. Feb. 21, 1859.

WIFE, CHILDREN AND FRIENDS.

When the black-lettered list to the gods was presented-A list of what Fate for each mortal intends; At the long string of ills a kind angel relented, And slipped in three blessings, Wife, Children and Friends.

In vain angry Lucifer swore he was cheated, That justice divine could not compass its ends, The scheme of man's fall he maintained was defeated, For earth becomes heaven with Wife, Children and Friends.

If the stock of our bliss be in strangers' hands vested, The funds, ill secured, oft in bankruptcy ends; But the heart issues bills that are never protested, When drawn on the firm of Wife, Children and

Though spice-breathing gales o'er his caravan hover, And around him Arabia's whole fragrance descends; The merchant still thinks of the woodbines that cover The bower where he sat with Wife, Children and

The soldier, whose deeds live immortal in story, Whom duty to far, distant latitudes sends, With pleasure would barter whole ages of glory, For one happy hour with Wife, Children and Friends.

Though valor still glows in his life's waning embers, The death-wounded tar, who his colors defends, Drops a tear of regret, as he dying remembers, How blessed was his cot, with Wife, Children and

THE CRADLE SONG OF THE POOR.

Hush! I cannot bear to see thee Stretch thy hands in vain ; I have got no bread to give thee, Nothing, child, to ease thy pain. When God sent thee first to bless me, Proud, and thankful, too, was I; Now, my darling, I, thy mother, Almost long to see thee die. Sleep, my darling, thou art weary;

I have watched thy beauty fading,

- And thy strength sink day by day; Soon, I know, will want and fever Take thy little life away. Famine makes thy father reckless, Hope has left both him and me; We could suffer all, my baby, Had we but a crust for thee. Sleep, my darling, thou art weary;

God is good, but life is dreary.

God is good, but life is dreary.

Better thou shouldst perish early, Starve so soon, my darling one, Than live to want, to sin, to struggle Vainly, still, as I have done. Better that thy angel spirit With my joy, my peace, were flown, Than thy heart grow cold and careless, Reckless, hopeless, like my own. Sleep, my darling, thou art weary; God is good, but life is dreary.

I am wasted, dear, with hunger, And my brain is all opprest, I have scarcely strength to press thee, Wan and feeble to my breast. Patience, baby, God will help us, Death will come to thee and me, He will take us to his heaven.

Where no want or pain can be. Sleep, my darling, thou art weary; God is good, but life is dreary.

Did we listen, we might hear Close beside us-but the thunder Of a city dulls our ear. Every heart, like God's bright angel, Can bid one such sorrow cease; God has glory when his children

Such the plaint, that late and early,

Bring his poor ones joy and peace! Listen, nearer while she sings, Sounds the fluttering of wings.

DINING WITH A BISHOP .- One of our leading prelates not long ago invited to his hospitable mansion in London a country rector, an old friend hour. Soon after he had taken his seat, tea was brought round. "Well," thought the rector, "this is bare living, at any rate; if I had known, I would have had a beefsteak at a chop house before I came; but I hardly expected that a bishop would dine at one o'clock. Is it a feast day, I wonder !"

He drank his tea, however, and said nothing. About half-past seven o'clock, his bed candle was placed in his hand, and he was conducted to his sleeping room. "Call you this London !" he soliloquized; " why I should have fared far better at Silverton ; I should have had my comfortable mutton chop, and my glass of beer at nine o'clock, and I should have been in bed at ten, well fed and contented. But here I am, halfstarved in the midst of splendor-as hungry as a hunter-almost ready to devour my blankets, like the box constrictor ha! ha!-and where everyyou may take the gilding." Soliloquizing in this the fibbing abilities of a certain Baron Munchaufashion, he undressed himself, pulled over his ears sen of his acquaintance .- " Lie!" said he, " lie! as the song says, and crept into bed, coiling himself up comfortably; and, being of a forgiving temper, he soon forgot his troubles; and sank into his first sleep as sweetly as a "christom child;" when, lo! after a while, bells begin to ring, and a table, sir ! " The old gentleman awoke in considerable confu- wouldn't a go an' take the bread out of my mouth, sion, not knowing whether it was to-day or to- would ye! sides, sir, cleanliness comes next to godmorrow; and, according to the most authentic liness, parson says." account, he appeared shortly after at the dinner table, though in a somewhat ruffled condition as relates to his wardrobe, and mentally in a haze of uncertainty as to the day of the week, and the meal he was eating .- Frazer's Mag. for Nov.

A resolution that no member shall be entitled to his per diem who shall be absent from his seat during the session, without providential Evans." cause, or leave of the Senate, was adopted in the "Mrs. Evans!" exclaimed the spirited bache-

How to Adjourn.

Some years ago, when the late Gov. Baker, of N. H., was Speaker of the House of that State, it became necessary that an adjournment should take place in the afternoon, in order that the honorable Speaker and a fellow piscator, at that time reporter for the Patriot, should get off on a fishing excursion. Business was pressing at the House, but so was the desire of the Speaker to get to the brook without delay. Sundry parties among the members were asked to move an adjournment; but no reasonable cause appearing to their minds to justicargo of a Philadelphia ship. Can you, or the many fy that step, they severally declined. The late readers of your valuable sheet, give the author's name? Hon. Ichabod Bartlett, of Portsmouth, was then a member of the Legislature, and although among the opposition, was made Chairman on the Judiciary-such was the deep respect paid to his ability and integrity by his fellow legislators through their popular Speaker. Mr. Bartlett's word was almost an oracle in every thing, for in nothing he said or did could the slightest indication of partizanship be detected, for there was none in reality. Knowing this fact, and the weight of any proposition Mr. Bartlett might make on the minds of the members, Speaker Baker, in his despair, arose and said, (speaking as quickly as he could) to the " Gentlemen, it is moved by the gentleman from Portsmouth, Mr. Bartlett, and seconded, that the House do now adjourn; as many as are in favor of the motion will say aye; those opposed, no; the ayes have it, and the House stands adjourned till Tuesday morning at ten o'clock."

Before the members could perfectly understand that they had been adjourned, the Speaker was out of the chair, and was making his way towards the door, Mr. Bartlett had risen to repudiate the motion, and got as far as "Mr. Speaker!" when that sentleman got fairly outside the hall, but looked back for a moment to see the fun.

"The House ain't adjourned, is it!" queried a member of Baker. " Assuredly," said the Speaker, " on motion of Mr. Bartlett. "I assuredly made no such motion, Mr, Baker," was Mr. Bartlett's assertion.

"That is doubtless the fact," responded Baker, but you ought to have done it half an hour ago, out of respect to the pressing requirement of the honorable Speaker, who, if good trotting can do it, will be wetting his line in Suncook river in half an hour hence."

Mr. Bartlett saw further remonstrance was useless; and with a look which said as plainly as speech : "I give you up as being one of the most incorrigible wags I ever met with," he put on his hat and followed the retreating wisdom of the State. So that was the way in which Speaker Baker procured an adjournment.—Boston Ledger.

NUMBER OF WORDS .- The number of good English words found in use by good writers could hardly fall short of 100,000. But we knew these mainly as we knew Greek, as book words, and not as the language of speech. Even if a man was able on extraordinary occasions to bring into use in wordy battle half of that number, he generally contented himself with far fewer. Each individual used in his daily life a repertory of words to some extent peculiar to himself-one which would furnish a key to his private history. Few scholars used as many as 10,000 English words; ordinary people not more than 3,000. In all Shakspeare there was not more than 15,000 words; in all Milton 8000. Of the Egyptian hieroglyphics there were but 800, and it was said that the vocabulary of the Italian opera was scarcely greater. -Professor Marsh.

TRIAL BY TORTURE. - At the time of the trial of John Felton, who assassmated Buckingham, in 1528, King Charles wished to have him put to the rack, partly for punishment, but under pretence of discovering who had instigated him to the act. The Judges, however, decided that there was no law in England which authorized the use of the torture. As it had been used often, it is to be presumed that this was the first, as it was the last, solemn adjudication upon the question by the bench. Felton, in his repentance, seemed to be desirous of the torture himself; for, at the trial, he stretched out his right arm, saying that it was that which did the deed, and desired that it might be cut off, " before he was done to." But the court replied that he should have only the law, and " must be content with that," and he met simply the appointed punishment of a murderer.

Influence of Out-door air and Sunshine on Longevity.

A writer in one of the medical magazines argues that the more out-door air and cheery sunshine a man can use, the longer he will live. Go along any of the fashionable streets of New York, says the writer, and you will find no less then three, and often six, distinct contrivances to keep out sunshine and gladness. First, the Venetian blind on the outside, second, the close shutter on the inside; third, the shade which is moved by rollers; then there are the lace curtains, the damask or other material, &c. In the train comes the exclusion of external air by means of the double sash, and a variety of patent contrivances to keep out any stray whiff of air from entering from the bottom, sides and tops of doors and windows. At this rate, we shall dwindle into Lilliputs, if we do not die off sooner.

Usefulness of Literary Men .- It is a known fact that a literary man, called upon to make a report on any question of a technical kind, say a question of drainage or water supply, will, even though on Monday he may know nothing whatever of the subject, be able, if he is a person of skill, and has access to the necessary materials, to furnish before Saturday a clearer, fuller and more accurate statement of all that is wanted, than could have been prepared by the united labors for a month of an entire committee of mere men of business. Nor is he to be specially thanked for this. from one of the remote provinces. The simple- Expression, the arrangement of words and paraminded gentleman came about five o'clock, having graphs, and the method of presenting it to the a notion that he should arrive about the dinner public apprehension, are arts to be acquired by practice; and the literary man has acquired them. -[London Weekly Times.

> Inon Toes .- A man who can endure to have his toes smashed without grumbling is undoubtedly possessed of a heavenly disposition. One of those true Christians being once at a political meeting, he said to a big, burly fellow who was standing upon his toe-

"My dear sir, are you not a miller?" " No, sir, why do you ask?"

"Why, sir, the fact is, I thought you were a miller, and a very honest one, too, because you have been grinding my corn this half hour without taking toll.'

THE SUPERLATIVE DEGREE .- Our friend Jones the other day, wishing to express the very highest thing looks so grand! Well, fine furniture won't degree of the superlative mood, hit the nail on the make a man fat; give me substantial victuals, and head exactly. He was conveying his opinion of his cotton nightcap, " with a tassel on the top," | why he will lie like a New York editor about the circulation of his paper!" Could the force of language go further.

An old washerwoman once would hang her clothes to dry on the railings of a church, and smart knock at his door resounds through his room, after repeated prohibitions from the churchwarand a voice is heard saying, "Dinner is on the dens, she at last came out with the following burst of eloquence :- "Lord bless ye, sir, ye

> IN SEARCH OF HER .- A member of the South Carolina Legislature, an old bachelor by the name of Evans, got off the following jeu d'esprit re-

He was introduced to a beautiful widow, also named Evans. The introduction was in this wise: " Mrs. Evans, permit me to present to you Mr.

Georgia Legislature, so as to apply solely to the lor, "the very lady I have been in search of for the last eight years !"

NOTICE.

WHEREAS THE UNDERSIGNED HAS BEEN INFORMED OF good authority that great irregularity exists in the taking and killing of the wild cattle on the mountains on Hawaii, be-longing to His Majesty and to the Government, by parties who claim or pretend to claim right under bills of sale from His Majesty or from the Government, and whereas, from the nature of the country and other causes it is almost impossible to place agents to guard the interests of His Majesty and of the Govern-ment, and whereas all parties having legal claims on the said wild cattle have already had time sufficient, if they have used due diligence to remove the same.

Now therefore, the undersigned hereby gives notice to all parties who purchased wild cattle running on the mountains on Ha-waii, previous to the 1st day of January 1857, to remove the same if not already removed, on or before the 1st day of May next, after which time, parties taking wild cattle will be prosecuted.
